Be a part of the history.

"My dad used to bring me here when I was a kid."

We often hear this at Clay's Café. It is then followed up with the question, "What was this place called before?"

In 1932, Earl and Dorothy Cummins started the business, then known as Cummins Ice Cream.

For 47 years, they made homemade ice cream. In its prime years, cars would line up on Route 40 waiting to get in for a delicious treat. Folks would drop in on their way home from nearby Buckeye Lake Park or en route to Grandma and Grandpa's. The store was first located in the house that sits next to the drive. Soon, more room was needed and the business moved to the back of the lot where it is today.

In 1979, the Cummins family sold the business. The Clay family purchased the ice cream and grocery and has owned it ever since. It was first run by Sherman and Evelyn, who named the business Country Fair Foods. Over time, the grocery part of the business gave way to pizza and subs. In 1997, their youngest daughter, Glenna, wanted to tie in the history of Route 40. Henry Clay was the senator responsible for obtaining financing for this part of the National Road. Being Glenna's maiden name, it was only fitting to call the family restaurant Clay's Café. Today, we service dine in, carry out and delivery to the area.

When we hear someone say, "My dad used to bring me here when I was a kid," we frequently ask, "And do you bring your children here so they can say the same thing?"

Carry on the tradition and be a part of history.
